Thus, it is on the one side, the study of wealth and on the other and more important side, a part of the study of man. Tax revenue is then used to pay for the things government needs to do: police, firefighters, roads and so on.

Economics

Tendencies are not universal laws. Ricardo was the first to state and prove the principle of , according to which each country should specialize in producing and exporting goods in that it has a lower relative cost of production, rather relying only on its own production. These norms are determined by the standards of quality adopted in the scientific community.
