Obesity rates are defined as the percentage of the population with a Body Mass Index BMI over 30. Patients in Japan must pay 30% of medical costs. Connections are a big part of the Chinese business world, and throughout different parts of China, businessmen would meet up in teahouses to take their job outside of the work atmosphere.

Improving Japan's health care system

Insurance for individuals is paid for by both employees and employers. Another is the fact that the poor economics of hospitals makes the salaries of their specialists significantly lower than those of specialists at private clinics, so few physicians remain in hospital practice for the remainder of their working lives. Salarymen doing straight: Heterosexual men and the dynamics of gender conformity.
