Althusser's Scientific Marxism

It should be remembered, however, that the epistemological break q. Though these essays repeat the Party philosophy as formulated by Lenin, Stalin, and Zhdanov, they also include recognizable Althusserian themes and show his thinking about these themes to be in transition.

That Althusser regards most, if not all, human activity as consisting of material processes of production and reproduction can be used as a key to understanding other parts of his philosophy. From the fruits of this new method of reading, Althusser argued that not only was Marx the originator of a new philosophy, Dialectical Materialism, that had nothing to do with its Hegelian and Feuerbachian predecessors, but that he also founded a new science, Historical Materialism, which broke with and superseded such ideological and pre-scientific precursors as the political economics of Smith and Ricardo.

However, they make slightly different uses of the concept of diachrony. For others, they simply revealed his project as a whole to be untenable and self-contradictory. This is especially true of the period between 1961 and 1966 when the majority of his published and unpublished work concerned itself with how to read Marx, the definition of Marxist philosophy, and how to understand and apply Marxian concepts.

Althusser's Scientific Marxism

In 1936, the family moved again, this time to Lyon.

Althusser's theory of ideology

Economic practice is the transformation of nature by human labour into social products, political practice the transformation of social relations by revolution, ideological practice the transformation of one relation to the lived world into a new relation by ideological struggle. For this reason, it is a good choice for someone unacquainted with his project to develop an initial familiarity. In this mode, it works to provide an aid to scientific practice by distinguishing between ideological concepts and scientific ones as well as by clarifying and rendering consistent the scientific concepts that enable a science to transform existing ideas into scientific knowledge.

Louis Althusser (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

A term for the articulation of a practice q. The mode of material production is the central concept of the theory of the economic practice of the social formation. In this understanding of history, feudalism must lead to capitalism and capitalism to socialism.

Althusser Glossary 1969

This Marxism has no system of interrelated concepts that guarantee a scientific analysis. As scientific knowledge does not speak directly to the public or to politicians, Althusser assigned materialist philosophers the job of communicating scientific knowledge of the material real, its conditions, and its possibilities to politicians and the public. A consequence of this is that Althusser posits the family as a basic ideological state apparatus and a site of the reproduction of productive relations.
