7 Modern Protest Movements that Proved Protesting DOES Accomplish Change

Social Change Collective behaviour and social movements are just two of the forces driving social change, which is the change in society created through social movements as well as external factors like environmental shifts or technological innovations. For example, PETA, a social movement organization, is in competition with Greenpeace and the Animal Liberation Front ALF, two other social movement organizations. Through programs that support families and invest in early childhood development, children could be prepared for school and not be forced into the position of having to catch up to their peers Roussin, Gill, and Young 2014.
