Days that I'll Remember: Spending Time with John Lennon and Yoko Ono

But Dylan will often reject those questions. There were moments when some of that pride and flair could rise up. The New York Times, July 30, 1989 Anniversary Fair.

Jonathan Cott

She died, aged 87, of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma in Palm Springs on March 22, 2018. But I believe we can share our dreams and sense of mystery and home in a true meeting, as occurs in many of the conversations collected here. For seriousness seeks to exclude play, whereas play can very well include seriousness.

Morgana King

In Part 1, he includes interesting and, in some cases, path-breaking interviews with rock legends like John Lennon, Bob Dylan, Mick Jagger, and Lou Reed, as well as with classical giants like Leonard Bernstein and Steve Reich. You just have to be receptive to it.
