The text, then, on which Greek moralists preached longest and loudest, on which Pindar preached loudest and oftenest, is the need of self-control. Was Pindar in thorough sympathy with the party of the Theban nobility to which he belonged by birth, by training, by temperament, or was he a friend of the national cause — as it is safe to call a cause after it has been successful? Country and city are often blended with goddess or heroine whose history of City of the victor. Hence the office of caesura to effect unity by dividing a word between two feet and so to force a more energetic recitation.

Pindar: The Olympian and Pythian Odes

His song is a flood that sweeps away the pebble counters of a long arrear of debt O. Carrière compares Boeotia with Austria and the Catholic South of Germany at the close of the eighteenth century, with their large contributions to the general rise of culture in song and music. It is commonly supposed that he lived to an advanced age.
