With such a feeling as this, Newton, despite his already great achievements in physics, was still far from reaching the limits of advancement in his learning. This is illustrated by the fact that Hui Shih was a great friend of Chuang-tzu.

Feng Joulan

They were always true to what they promised, and without regard to their own persons, they would rush into dangers threatening them.

This is, that the Confucianists considered human-heartedness as a quality that develops naturally from within the human nature, whereas the Mohists considered all-embracing love as something artificially added to man from without. This is to say, it does not describe anything above what it is through which all the things come to be.
