A Vindication of the Rights of Women. And, in a self-consuming rhetorical gesture, the poem argues against any more discourse, any more talk.

An Introduction to Literature, Criticism and Theory

The canon, for Bloom, is élitist and discriminatory or it is nothing. The uncanny you catch sight of someone whom you think looks rather disturbing and then you realize that you have caught sight of this person reflected in a window or a mirror and that this person is yourself. In terms of literature, Structuralists emphasize langue the system of how texts relate to each other and not parole individual texts.
