Expert tips for writing the best flash fiction

I've been told by an agent that my 170,000 word adult fantasy is way too long and that I should cut it to 60,000-80,000. If you have, then chances are you know either love it or hate it. What questions do you still have on how to write a nonfiction book? If you think a 270,000-word memoir will make it past the agent, do it! However, if you're done with your first draft and you're shocked by the amount of words in it, it might be time to cut down.

How to Cite Sources in Your Manuscript

The Old Man and the Sea was about 25 to 30,000 words, tops. The way to know if your book falls in this genre is to think about the core purpose. Publishing house guidelines vary, so check their website or contact them directly to find out what they expect lengthwise.
