MORIANCUMER: Columbus' Revelation

So the caravels continued to ply between Espanola and Spain, their holds crowded with miserable cargoes of human cattle. To illustrate the glory of his nation is one of the noblest offices of the historian; and it is difficult to speak too highly of the extraordinary enterprises and splendid actions of the Spaniards in those days.

They have likewise hogs with horns, and excellent talking parrots, which they call Noris. The Spaniards will not need hereafter to mine and dig far into the earth, nor to cut asunder mountains in quest of gold, but will find it plentifully, in a manner, on the upper crust of the earth, or in the sands of rivers dried up by the heats of summer. All this was effected, not by arms, but by 'arts; not by the stratagems of a cabinet, but by the wisdom of a college.

The Age of Exploration : From Christopher Columbus to Ferdinand Magellan

These and various other charges of similar nature were dispassionately investigated.

Ethnohistoric Sources on Foodways, Feasts, and Festivals in Mesoamerica

In the letter that prefaces his journal of the first voyage, the admiral vividly evokes his own hopes and binds them all together with the conquest of the infidel, the victory of Christianity, and the westward route to discovery and Christian alliance:.

A General History and Collection of Voyages and Travels — Volume 02 eBook

This author cites an assertion as made by St. The alcalde mayor was inflexible, and Nicuesa was reduced to despair.

Columbus, Letter from the Fourth Voyage

Along with the scenery, Columbus never tired of extolling the docility and peaceful nature of the timid people who had welcomed him and his fellow voyagers with such awe and affection to their island Eden. Several times he was summoned to attend conferences in the vicinity of the sovereigns, when besieging cities in the very heart of the Moorish dominions; but the tempest of warlike affairs which hurried the court from place to place and gave it all the bustle and confusion of a camp, prevented those conferences from taking place, and swept away all concerns that were not immediately connected with the war.
