One of the areas of the latter is to participate in various operations abroad and there have been several researches and publications on this topic. It can also impose sanctions whenever an unconstitutional change of government takes place in a member state. The Coalition Provisional Authority CPA established the Central Criminal Court of Iraq CCCI in July 2003 to hear cases involving serious criminal offenses, including terrorism, organized crime, government corruption, acts of sabotage and sectarian or ethnic violence.

Memorialisation as an often neglected aspect in the consolidation of transitional justice

Nonmilitary interventions can take several forms, including fact-finding and goodwill missions to the member state or states, either by special envoys, eminent personalities and members of the Council of the Wise or even members of the PSC or the Commission. At the same time, a vision for a single system of work was needed to support national recovery efforts to rebuild institutions.
