If a poor person stole £10 from Dunnes Stores in Dublin they would be given a six months' sentence but the judge in that case gave a suspended sentence. Since the publication, in February 1989, of the Southwood Report, which gives an account of the first cases of BSE in the United Kingdom, the Community institutions have requested the SVC and scientists to offer their views on the various problems associated with the disease and financed research in the area.

Farmers are entitled to compensation, especially as this crisis has occurred because individual member states such as France and Germany refused to put in place appropriate BSE control measures in 1996. In addition, these laws require that we exercise care in our business dealings with entities in and from foreign countries.
