Disability & Health Information for

Family Caregivers

His parents are now saying that I can't expel him because his bad behavior is due to a disability.

Caring for a Child with Disabilities

Here is the place for the intervention of specialized associations and other forms of extra-family help; this ensures the presence of persons with whom the child can establish an educational relationship. In some ways, getting connected with a national organization can be enormously helpful.

How to find family balance with a special needs child

You may or may not decide to join a support group. These are some reflections we would like to share with the many families of the world and with the various movements and institutions involved in this crucial field. That doesn't mean it's not hard and doesn't make us sad.

Tax Tips for Parents of a Child with Special Needs

Yet 7,600 people on the waiting list in Maryland either have no services or need more. But they can make a big difference. They may also invite speakers on relevant topics, including members of the district staff who may be able to answer parent concerns and questions.

The family with a handicapped child: a review of the literature

. Children who pose a direct threat -- a substantial risk of serious harm to the health and safety of others -- do not have to be admitted into a program. The creation of specialized workplaces or institutions for the disabled, as well as more effective help from social workers, should facilitate the integration so strongly desired by the Holy See's 1981 document.

Does the ADA protect those who care for an elderly or disabled family member?

Local parents are also natural friends, and their kids may become friends with your child.

What happens to developmentally disabled as parents age, die?

She is in a day program with other adults with disabilities, and they often go out into the community, like to a nature center or to the movies. These groups are, obviously, not anonymous.
