Geneviève Rodis

As Descartes tells Princess Elizabeth: There is nothing to repent of when we have done what we judged best at the time when we had to decide to act, even though later, thinking it over at our leisure, we judge that we made a mistake. In that I am entirely in agreement with him

Biographie de René Descartes

Since we are forced to act under conditions of uncertainty, it might seem to follow that we are condemned to a life of moral error, constantly making wrong choices on the basis of inadequate perceptions of the goodness and badness of objects. In 1606 Descartes entered La Flèche, a Jesuit college established by the king for the instruction of the young nobility.
