Molecular Phylogeny of Dipterocarpaceae

Stipules paired, large or small, persistent or fugacious, leaving small to amplexicaul scars. CRC Press, Ann Arbor, MI.

Phylogeny of the tropical tree family Dipterocarpaceae based on nucleotide sequences of the chloroplast RBCL gene Parisii, Sumptibus Sociorum Treuttel et Wurtz. Systematic, geographic, and phyletic considerations. Columbia University Press, New York, NY.

Biodiversity of Sri Lanka: Dipterocarpaceae (58)

Nine of the 24 trees sampled had individual outcrossing estimates of less than 90%. Other factors potentially contributing to the high observed allozyme diversity in this species would be large effective population sizes, introgression of genes from sympatric species, and retention of ancient allozyme polymorphism. For Pgi and Skdh, the fifth allele was included with allele 2.

Dipterocarpaceae

Enzymes were extracted by adding a buffer developed by Michael Chase University of Massachusetts, Boston, MA to leaf or seed material crushed in liquid nitrogen. This issue might be cleared with future studies of the molecular phylogeny of the genus.
