Bracebridge, Charles Holte): (1827)

The side doors of the cathedral are opened for private devotion every morning and evening at six o'clock. In 1835, the population around being more than doubled, the chapel was enlarged, at a cost of about £1,300, by the addition of at least one-third of its present length, forming it into a proper oblong; besides the construction of a suitable chancel, and the galleries extended throughout the new part.
