For the Love of Tomorrow -- 4. I commend the male author, Michael Henderson, for this inspiring and practical grass roots biographical book. He puts together engrossing stories of some of the true great heroines of peace in the world - women who truly have addressed that treacherous business of people living together in some kind of harmony.

All her paths are peace : women pioneers in peacemaking : Henderson, Michael, 1932

He relates their global and gripping stories, depicting the practical yet often risky steps each woman took to resolve the conflict facing her.

All Her Paths are Peace

The fragile peace agreements that have in the post--Cold War years sought to resolve protracted conflicts fall well short of being genuine, stable settlements. Henderson recounts the stories of remarkable women who made a difference by helping to bring peace to their communities. These are the real live heroines movies should be made of.

See below: Review of NO ENEMY TO CONQUER, in Publishers Weekly Dec 15, 2008 No Enemy to Conquer: Forgiveness in an Unforgiving World Michael Henderson, foreword by the Dalai Lama. These innovators come from diverse lifestyles, but as they choose their separate paths, they all light the way to peace. Most instructive, however, are the stories of people, from Chechnya to Pennsylvania Amish country, who have suffered unspeakable acts at the hands of enemies and staunchly refuse to be consumed by victimhood.
