Libraries

Under Coolidge, the Library acquired nearly 100,000 volumes, including significant collections from Slavic, Scandinavian, and other European countries, as well as collections from the Ottoman Empire and East Asia. The appeal was answered enthusiastically by the Ukrainian-American community, who made their private collections available to the Harvard University Library either through gift or sale. A Century of Hebraica at the Library of Congress, Jewish Quarterly Review

As a library leader, Martha has worked to ensure that research libraries are deeply embedded in their teaching, learning and research communities, and that they are deeply engaged in developing an open, sustainable, global knowledge commons for the benefit of those communities and society as a whole. The Ukrainian collection at the Harvard University Library, the largest collection outside Eastern Europe, is located primarily in Widener Library and Houghton Library, with the remainder housed in several specialized collections on campus Fine Arts, Music, Anthropology, Science, Law, including the Institute's own Reference Library. The College Alumni Programs Office of the HAA provides support for class leadership, governance, programs, and events.
