Some rules for the conduct of life : To which are added, a few cautions, for the use of such freeman of London, as take apprentices. (eBook, 1800) [ne-x.uni.rf.gd]

The royal reason, the Grace of God, seems the only description of our multiform but ever identical fact.

Cooking and Dining in Imperial Rome

And, in all human action, those faculties will be strong which are used. Yet we make shift to live. Therefore man must be on his guard against this cup of enchantments, and must look at nature with a supernatural eye.

Cooking and Dining in Imperial Rome

Confine it by granite rocks, let it wash a shore where wise men dwell, and it is filled with expression ; and the point of greatest interest is where the land and water meet. They are so much the more upon their guard, because, taking it for granted, that the Spaniards and Portuguese would miss no opportunities to revenge the affront and insulting usage they had met with, they apprehend, that in order to bring this about they might one time or other combine with the Dutch. If you follow the suburban fashion in building a sumptuous-looking house for a little money, it will appear to all eyes as a cheap dear house.

So a portrait of a well-known face gratifies us. All things are known to the soul. Thus, in his sonnets, the lays of birds, the scents and dyes of flowers, he finds to be the shadow of his beloved; time, which keeps her from him, is his chest; the suspicion she has awakened, is her ornament ; The ornament of beauty is Suspect, A crow which flies in heaven s sweetest air.

[BARNARD, Sir John]

I was told by an old Japanese, that the following incident, with many more of the like nature, very much incens'd the Emperor, and hasten'd his resolution, to let the proud Portuguese feel. When this appears among so many that surround it, the spirit prefers it to all others.
