I have plenty of occupation for my fingers.

Julia Ward Howe, 1819

Samuel Gridley Howe was at this time 1842 forty-one years of age; his life had been a stirring and adventurous one.

Howe, Henry Marion, 1848

Oh, what are earthly things, which we must all lose when we die — to our immortal souls which never die! Before the birth of each successive child, she was oppressed by a deep and persistent melancholy.

Henry Marion Howe

In 1990 he received the Meritorious Achievement Award of the Association of Professional Engineers of British Columbia and a UBC Killam Research Prize. . Since that time, I have not once laid by — we have had some rough days, but I have always held up my head, and eaten my dinner, 'helping myself sangfroidy' to all manner of good things.

ADB Home

In return for all the delight he had given me, I had nothing to give him but my silent tears. . His true devotion has won me from the world, and from myself.
