Matthew 11:12

He was not given much of a chance to think for himself. You look, you feel, you come away seeing and knowing things differently. He works as a prophet, and thinks like a prophet.

The Violent Bear It Away book by Flannery O'Connor

He did not look in the eyes of any fiery beast or see a burning bush. O'Connor observes all this with an astonishing combination of irony and compassion, humor and pathos, resulting in a novel where range and depth reveal a brilliant and innovative writers acutely alert to where the sacred lives and to where it does not. Here then is a sampling of colloquial titles, culled from eight decades of classic and contemporary literature.

These characters are searching, but don't seem to be able to fully sense God's love for them--is that because they lack faith, is it ignorance of God, is it because they have had such horrible, unloving experiences in their lives? I read it in O'Connor's masterful short story collection The Complete Stories, so this story and characters were as familiar to me as an old ghost story.
