UNODC

Justice is administered by the courts of the unified system of Ukraine.

Human Trafficking and Transnational Enforcement

Victims not requiring specialized services may have chosen not to pursue official victim status, although NGOs reported the emphasis on documents deterred some labor victims and members of the Romani community from applying. Eighty-five cases from 2019 remained ongoing in the courts, compared to 55 in 2018.

Human Trafficking and Transnational Enforcement

The government, with assistance from an international organization, continued to provide victim identification and referral training to diplomats.

UNODC

A person cannot be President for more than two consecutive times. According to an international organization, the national referral mechanism did not formalize a process for NGOs to access state funding. Despite the identification of 107 victims, the government granted only 54 victims official victim status under the 2011 anti-trafficking law; 16 victims obtained official status in 2012.
