The only son, William George, was born in 1787. I suspected that it was an important document but since I was working in an area that was completely new to me I turned for advice to Gillian Hutchinson, the Curator of the History of Cartography at the NMM. I am very glad to hear that Admiral Gardner is Admiral of our Fleet.

Sir William Parker

In October 1781 Parker had been appointed to the Iphigenia 32 in succession to Captain Charles Hope, although it appears that the latter continued with the Iphigenia until the early spring of 1782 when his new command, the Leocadia, became available for service. The rear-admiral, anxious to apprise the commander-in-chief of such an event, without delay, dispatched the Tonnant to the Channel fleet; and on his arrival there, on the 25th of January, Captain Jervis, eager to make the communication, left the Tonnant in one of the ship's boats to proceed to the St.
