Module 2: Research Design

Gathering scholarly work from a multisectoral field, the journal offers critique, analysis and insight with regard to vulnerable children and youth in a range of settings, and aims to be widely consulted for cutting-edge research as well as effective policy and intervention. The social work research examining people's sense of self and a projected self draws on broad sociological theories of identities as something that are not only plural—we have multiple identities—but identities as socially located.
