Headship, Submission & The Bible: Gender Roles in the Home

With regard to the word inferiority, two comments: 1 the Bible never suggests that the differing roles of men and women imply differing worth; 2 women and men are inferior and superior to each other in various ways, but these are not made the sign of varying value as persons. Jesus does not force us to submit. But it is used in Ephesians in the singular.

There are plenty of sentences in the NT with two phrases which say almost the same thing. But God did say, just before he made her, that it was not good for the first human to be alone. Paul and Peter use different words when asking for submission from husbands.

Headship and Submission

His aim is to temper their power and prevent abuse and harshness. Christ also forgave unconditionally and without being asked. Someone who is not inferior nor a rival, rather someone who has complimentary set of skills to make up for what is lacking.

What the Bible Says About Submission in Marriage

It could be anything but commit to do it everyday. It seems that just as Christ is the sustainer and source of nurture for the church, the husbands were to be the sustainer and source of nurture for their wives.

And boil me up another pot of tea. I think Christians should let the spirit of God lead them to say the truth to the church and the world to reverse this trend by every spirit led means rather than pushing for more rivalries and power tussle at the home front. The Master, the One the disciples followed, was serving His followers.
