Rejuvenating Korea: Policies for a Changing Society

One year after its entry into the OECD, Korea was hit by a financial crisis, caused by the flight of short-term financial capital. Responding to the high population pressure coupled with extreme poverty, the government became more involved in family planning.

Public Education as Welfare

Moreover, the federal government encourages the delivery of health care and pensions through private employers by allowing them to deduct the cost from taxes, and it supervises them with massive regulations, notably the Employee Retirement Security Act of 1974.

1945

For example, the first son is most valued and can satisfy all functional necessities of the family according to the traditional family system. Education, in fact, is the only public benefit financed largely by property taxes. Korea has given increasing attention over the past decade to the social safety net.

South Korea

Actually almost opposite to each other. Nevertheless, the trend of fertility decline could not be controlled and it appears to have dropped below the replacement level in the mid 1980s, as was also the case in South Korea.

Happier Economy Better Than Larger Economy

There are many others, and there will be more, as our interaction and understanding grow stronger. Its benefits are universal and not means tested, which makes them similar to Social Security although Social Security benefits received by high income individuals are taxed. In 1962, the government began a series of 5-year national plans for economic development, and the national economy began to grow rapidly.

Population Change and Development in Korea

A few weeks ago, the government announced the Vision 2030 plan, which provides a comprehensive long-term strategy to transform Korea into a fully advanced country and addresses key challenges such as rapid population ageing. Other cultural traits—such as parental obligation to support children for their worldly success, and the authoritarian involvement of the state leadership in family planning—are regarded as having been important factors in the rapid fertility reduction. Iraqi Kurdistan has two main political parties, the Kurdistan Democratic Party KDP and the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan PUK , both clan-based and patriarchal.
