David & Igor OISTRAKH

With largely forgotten names such as Catoire and Vladigerov sitting alongside some of the greatest composers in musical history, the compilation represents a musical feast that is not to be passed up. Being an eager advocate of new music brought him into contact with most Soviet composers of the time and he befriended many of them.

Sonata, opus 56, for two violins (Musical score, 1963) [ne-x.uni.rf.gd]

. Naturally, the majority of these recordings were made for Melodiya, the Soviet State recording company, but EMI Classics are privileged to have worked with Oistrakh in the studio more than any other record company in the West and these recordings are not only technically superior but are of immeasurable musical worth.

The finale, Allegro con brio -- Più presto, is a droll rondo with scampering, angular themes for the two instruments; near the end, reintroduces the sonata's opening melody. The ensuing Allegro, in contrast, begins percussively, with one violin then taking up an urgent, angular theme that both instruments develop energetically though at a rather reduced volume, letting themselves go only in the brilliant coda.

Sergei Prokofiev's Violin Sonatas Op. 80 and 94bis: a historical and comparative study of manuscripts, early editions and interpretations by David Oistrakh and Joseph Szigeti

The warmer style and highly effective sequence mirrors Prokofiev's condition at the time of composition: after his travels to the West away from Russia, his work became increasingly more embracing rather than the confrontational and biting scores of his youth. Is it a good teaching tool? David Oistrakh: Beethoven Violin Concerto in D major, Op. Allegro ma non troppo cont.

Violin Sonata No 2 in D major, Op 94bis (Prokofiev)

David Oistrakh and Lev Oborin: Beethoven Violin Sonata No. What is particularly evident from this release is that no matter how big or small, famous or little-known, each work is treated as a masterpiece.

Marbecks » David Oistrakh

The F minor is a big-boned, dark-hued expression of feeling that can be taken as mourning for the depredations of Soviet terror; the D major is one of those seraphically contented neoclassical excursions that adorn mid-20th-century music.
