The Woodcarver and Death by Hagar Olsson

Five times the detectives arranged the pole in the way that Muggli had said, but they could not get it to fall in the way that he claimed. Again he based his presentation on a great diversity of products that he demonstrated or described, including candy, ice cream flavoring, livestock feed, and ink. Every tool is hand-sharpened to Nora's specifications.

The woodcarver and death. (1965 edition)

What he did was less important than what he was and the larger purposes his existence served for blacks and whites alike. He is caught up in their plight and eventually accompanies them to their small, seemingly-backward Orthodox village.

Shooting of John T. Williams

In addition to the imagery, the language and tone of the epitaphs changed during this period as well.

Robin Wood Death

Muggli and his wife, who was 61 when she died, became famous for carving three totem poles that were used in the Indian Village section of Princess Diana's Memorial Children's Park in Kensington Gardens, London. A 1949 book from the University of North Carolina Press, Edward J.
