The Prostate Cancer Survivor's Guide

The guidelines discuss recommendations for health promotion, surveillance for prostate cancer recurrence, screening for second primary cancers, assessment and management of physical and psychosocial long-term and late effects of prostate cancer and its treatment, and care coordination. The ACS notes that the 15-year survival rate for those diagnosed with prostate cancer is 96 percent—meaning that 96 percent of people diagnosed with the disease live for 15 years past their diagnosis date. Based on the results, my doctor determined that I had stage II.
