New Direction (think tank)

We show that historical sociology comprises no fewer than four distinct analytic architectures, each of which uses different kinds of sources and interfaces evidence and theory in different ways. When the protection of children and the maintenance of parent-child relationships are involved, many incarcerated parents and their relatives are wary of formal organizations, avoid them when they can, and find them to be less than helpful Beckerman, 1994; Hairston, Wills and Wall, 1997; Bates, 2001. More and more parents face the difficult task of raising their children alone.
