What made this even more odd was that Ghent-Ghent's route was the same route as that of the Tour of Flanders until the end of the war.

Tour des Flandres 1991

The steepest of all is the fully cobbled , 600 meters in length with grueling stretches of 22% over a poorly paved narrow road. The Ronde moved towards modern rules in 1951, with riders being allowed limited help from team cars and to combine with others from the same team on the road. More riders specialized in the , with the Tour of Flanders scheduled as the first of the April Classics.

Tour of Flanders

The first of these starts with the Oude Kwaremont — the only climb to feature in the race three times — and heads out to Geraardsbergen for the Muur, before returning to Oudenaarde and commencing two shorter laps, in which the Paterberg and Koppenberg both feature.
