Music Culture in Lesotho

When a man wanted to relocate to a new village, it became customary for him to carry his koto club in order to attain land.

Musical instruments of Lesotho

Basotho who went to work in the South African mines met other ethnic groups from sub-Saharan Africa as well as workers from European decent, who introduced them to the concertina korostina and the accordion koriana. In 2020, accordion music remains as potent as ever, with a variety of styles to boot. This ancient instrument of the Khoi people, known as gora was once widespread throughout present day South Africa, as it was readily adopted by several newly arrived Bantu peoples —called ughwali by the Xhosa, kwadi by the Pedi, lesiba by the Sotho.

The first one we sent in 1984 failed, but the one we sent in 1985 got accepted.

Mohobelo music in Lesotho

Most frequently heard on the radio are various sub-Saharan AfroPop styles, Sotho Hip-hop, RnB, Deep house, Soulful House, Dancehall, Jazz, , and reggae. Marriage proceedings begin with the men collecting and chopping wood, slaughtering sacrificial animals and preparing the home of the newlyweds.

Mohobelo music in Lesotho

These styles have created cohesion or brought about rivalry throughout the years. The playlist below compresses time by it covers various styles of playing the music, from different eras, and in different regions in Lesotho.
