The three parts of the threefold practice are like the three legs of a tripod; one cannot stand alone without the support of the other two. This tendency of conceptualizing modernity with the civilization and culture of the West has created the assumption that the modern is equated with the West and the pre-modern with traditional Asia.

The goal of this guideline is to make Buddhism available to the general public, as he states: The teachings of the Buddha embody supreme truth. The text does not indicate in what year this letter was written, but it should be dated, according to its content, after the introduction of Great Enlightenment Teaching in North Jiandao in 1927. Is this the problem of our time or is this my fate? Even at that time, Yongsŏng was aware that the tendency of not observing precepts had been damaging the root of Korean Buddhism.
