On April 22, 1915, the Germans launched their first and only offensive of the year. Within a few weeks of this photograph being taken these men were in action during the.

Second Ypres 1915

It was not the first time the Germans had used gas, but it was the first time it had a lethal effect. The photographs were taken in July 2016 just after the centenary commemorations. Cassino Cemetery and Memorial, Italy Gueudecourt Newfoundland Memorial, France It marks the spot where, in October 1916, the Newfoundlanders played a decisive role in the capture of a German strong-point named Rainbow Trench, helping them regain confidence after the great losses at Beaumont-Hamel.

The Second Battle of Ypres

The 3rd Canadian Division captured Vapour Farm at the corps' boundary, Furst Farm to the west of Meetcheele and the crossroads at Meetcheele, but remained short of its objective line. Once more guns roared on the Menin Road and one of the German crew had a minute to stop and photograph the that was close to the same junction below.

The Great War — Battle of Vimy Ridge

The number of photos of Germans visiting the Menin Gate in 1940 are quite staggering, and there must have been an awareness of not just what it was but what it stood for. Some of the Germans were protected by miner's oxygen breathing apparatus.
