Mikalojus Konstantinas Čiurlionis Memorial Museum

Bronisława Wolman provided funds to visit Prague, Germany and Vienna, where Čiurlionis was fascinated by the works of Van Dyck, Rembrandt and Arnold Böcklin. Three years out of primary school, he went to study at the musical school of Polish Prince Michał Ogiński in Plungė, where he learned to play several instruments, in particular the flute, from 1889 to 1893.

Naopak v jeho skladbách jsou patrné aluze na vizuální vjemy Moře. While at the Museum, visitors want to look more deeply into the reproductions of pictures painted by this man of genius, linger in the exposition halls and listen to the music in the background created by this Composer. Clearly he was recognised as a significant artist.

About: Mikalojus Konstantinas Čiurlionis

Opusovaných děl je pouze 34 - posledním dílem je proslulá Fuga op. It is during these years that his combination of sound and image takes hold, for which he'd later be called a synthesist. The museum also hosts various cultural events: concerts for children and professional performers, book presentations, lectures, seminars, scientific conferences, guided tours, and educational programs specifically made for children and youth.
