This limitation does not probably avail much; if sold to another master before the five years expired, they would never be likely to be free again. A writer by the name of Dallas has the hardihood to assert that it is mere sophistry to censure the practice of training dogs to devour men. No places of public worship are prepared for the negro; and churches are so scarce in the slaveholding States, compared with the number of white inhabitants, that it is not to be supposed great numbers of them follow their masters to such places; and if they did, what could their rude, and merely sensual minds comprehend of a discourse addressed to educated men? ITS INEVITABLE EFFECT UPON ALL CONCERNED IN IT.
