Living with Dying

Palliative care begins at the start of a serious illness and is given alongside treatments designed to combat the disease. The need for palliative care may not be as obvious and it depends on the psychosocial, spiritual and physical necessities of each patient rather than on diagnosis.

Living with Dying : A Guide to Palliative Care by Mary Baines, Cicely M. Saunders and Robert Dunlop (1995, UK

Problems Comforting care Not eating Feed small spoonfuls of food. BMJ 2015 As stated in section I, there is a need for population based planning of PC service provision. This will continue to be an invaluable handbook for all hospice physicians and nurses as a compassionate source of factual information.

Palliative Care: An Update

This is more evident in hospitals where in the past five years, the number of academic, community and faith-based hospitals offering palliative care services has soared. Additionally, a larger number of patients exist with more complex chronic conditions involving multiple co-morbidities. For those of us who have had experience, your point about guilt and telling ourselves we did the best we could is very important.

Living and dying well with end

It is written with clarity and compassion and will not fail to stimulate and motivate the reader.
