Unless he was at sea, it would have been most difficult to observe. Driven by strong westerly winds they reached on 26 January 1777 where they took on water and wood and became cursorily acquainted with the aborigines living there. His early teens were spent on the farm where his father worked, but a brief apprenticeship in a coastal village north of brought him into contact with ships and the sea.

Zimmermann's account of the third voyage of Captain Cook 1776

Cook's two ships spent about a month in Nootka Sound, from 29 March to 26 April 1778, in what Cook called Ship Cove, now Resolution Cove, at the south end of Bligh Island, about 5 miles 8 km east across Nootka Sound from Yuquot, a village whose chief Cook did not identify but may have been. After stopping briefly at the island of Kauai to collect supplies, the ships continued north.
