Apuani

In 1845 the retignanesi opposed the English entrepreneur William Walton, as his marble trade damaged their land for grazing and harvesting chestnuts and wood.

Lorenzo Marcuccetti. Saltus Marcius. Sconfitta di Roma Nazione ligure

At the time of the Unification of Italy, in 1861, the inhabitants of the village were engaged in a large part in the excavations and the economy became mainly linked to marble, with a progressive less than half of the cultivation of chestnut trees and a reduction of land destined to crops. In the two-year period 1861-1862, according to some estimates of the levigianese Emilio Simi, more than half of the Versilian workforce was employed in marble activities.
