Distribution of Income and Wealth in Ontario Theory and Evidence

Progressive tax systems require the rich to pay taxes at higher rates, to make it possible to raise larger total sums to pay for governmental functions. Families that own a large amount of property may not have an equally high income. ADVERTISEMENTS: Income and Wealth Inequality in Economics! At higher education levels, all households show increased ownership of risky assets, but the gap does not appear to narrow as it does with housing equity.

b) Factors that affect wealth and income distribution

References Altonji, Joseph, Uhlrich Doraszelski, and Lewis Segal. Even after controlling for income and demographic factors, Blau and Graham 1990 found that almost three-quarters of the black-white wealth gap could not be explained; they speculated that differences in intergenerational transfers and, to a smaller extent, barriers to the accumulation of home and business equity might be responsible. While the persons receiving transfers from such programs may prefer to be directly given cash, these programs may be more palatable to society than cash assistance, as they give society some measure of control over how the funds are spent.
