Open University Press - Folk devils and fear: QAnon feeds into a culture of moral panic

Marxist Theory on the Media

- Marxists would argue it is not surprising that moral panics centre around groups viewed as deviant or threatening to the rich and powerful in society
- They highlight the way the media portrays criminals as working-class, ignoring white-collar or corporate crime.
- Frankfurt School point to the ideological control the media exerts in perpetuating false consciousness. Louis Althusser would describe the media as an ideological state apparatus.

It is my opinion, that the media are a cause of moral panics as the evidence seems overwhelming. The media in particular is consistently a catalyst for, and a tool of, moral panics because its primary purpose is to entertain, rather than to inform—presenting factual evidence in a straightforward way may be informative and helpful to the general public, but it is not as entertaining as sensationalistic reporting on dramatic issues : 295. Stanley Cohen created the term moral panic in 1972 for recounting the media coverage of Mods and Rockers in the UK during the 1960s.
