Life in the Middle Ages

Glass and history go hand in hand so to say. It would be a HUGE help. Infant mortality was extremely high where 1 in 5 children died before their first birthday and many women died in childbirth.

A History of Biscuits

Seattle, WA: Ford, 1996, p. Examples of towns founded in the 12th and 13th centuries include Portsmouth, Plymouth, Hull, Leeds, , , and.

In the 11th century, monastic workshops for the service of the church began to decline, disappearing one after another to be replaced by workshops. Instead, they rested their heads on wooden logs. That is the reason that glass from that period is often called Frankish-Merovingian.

Part 2

In a castle, the toilet or garderobe was a chute built into the thickness of the wall. At them, knights fought with wooden lances, swords, or maces.

Part 2

The buildings grew in the 13th century.
