Though it was implemented across the board in 2003, by Dutch gymnastics equipment company Janssen-Fritsen. The horse wears a standard bridle with side reins.

Vaulting

Because people are continually moving on top of and, on and off the horse, it needs to have a very strong back. If, however, the gymnast touches any portion of the springboard or vault itself, she receives a score of zero and may not make another attempt, as happened to Ekaterina Kramarenko during the team final at the 2007 World Championships. The shoulders and hips are parallel to the shoulder axis of the horse.
