A narrow street leads from the gate to the market-place, where two pieces of cannon are planted before the guard-house; the first pre caution against internal commotion, which we had seen in the coun try. This little voyage saves a walk of about three hundred yards to the nearest bridge. His privileges were oppressive, and he had and made use of the right of imposing a variety of taxes, which extended even to the articles of provision imported either by land or sea.

Vines cover a great part of these plains, and are here first seen in Germany, except, indeed, within the walls of Cologne itself, which contain many large inclosures, converted from gardens and orchards into well sheltered vineyards. The almost perpendicular view into the streets of Utrecht affords afterwards some relief to the eye, but in creases any notions of danger, you may have had from observing, that the openwork Gothic parapet, which alone prevents you from falling with dizziness, has suffered something in the general decay of the church.
