One needs only consider Lev Kuleshov's famous editing experiment to recognize the similarities. They represent all humans in the approach of their consciousness to the reality swirling about them; while each individual may have a distinct mental vernacular, all of us can identify with the process of their thoughts. Finally, I apply the ideas expressed in André Bazin's essays on Italian Neorealism to Dubliners, illustrating the parallels in purpose and method between these two depictions of European life.

This new modernist aesthetic appears in both literature and cinema and can be analyzed using discussions by Hugh Kenner, Walter Benjamin and Arnold Hauser.

JAMES JOYCE INTRODUCTIONS

Not only does Joyce portray different people in distinct places sharing similar experiences, he also depicts those in different times and cultures as much the same. That of the painter is a total one, that of the cameraman consists of multiple fragments which are assembled under a new law.
