Yard Design

The only time the two yards interact with each other is usually on transfer runs, where cars that have to go back the other way get handed off from one side to the other.

These are great additions and can add a sense of realism to your model.

Model Railroad Track and Layout Plans

Cars on tracks near the front of the layout get knocked over and scenery gets damaged by leaning people. This is great to give an overall spray to the models. It may work for a while but as soon as another train arrives or you need to put another one together, you have nowhere to put it.

Freight car classifications

The also offers reprints of the 1943 and 1953 ORERs. It is my hope that this article is one source of that information for you.

Weathering

Display in railroad modeling refers to how you show off your model.

Weathering

I have been making various designs that capture the main theme of the region and type of operation, and even planning to make my next personal layout based on that theme. You owe it to yourself and others who will operate the yard to give some thought to making the model-human interface simple and easy to run.

Model Railroad Track and Layout Plans

These aspects will influence your planning and how you actually build your layout. One point to remember when you use this alcohol solution on a keeper car. They had 15,295 boxcars listed in the October 1926 ORER.

Weathering

Dust and dirt that was applied earlier may run down with the solution and collect along the bottom edge. A car equipped with machinery for pile driving.
