Head, Edmund Walker, Sir

Kugler upon the masters of the 15th and 16th centuries a large number of eminent painters of a later time may be said to have been far too scantily noticed. In perfect agreement with this character are the harmoniously broken colouring, the tender tints of the flesh, the moderate nature of the modelling, and the soft and fused style of the execution.

An example of this is afforded by his four pictures executed for the triumphal arches of the Cardinal Infant at Ghent. The magnificent family picture of John Duke of Nassau, with his Duchess and children, at Pansh- anger, the grandest of all his grand family pictures, bears this date.

Had he been able to prove that this person was identical with the painter of the same name we should know that he died on the 28th of Feb. Judging from the strong influence of the Van Eyck school seen in this work — from the individuality of many of the heads, the rendering of the materials of the dra- peries, and the sharp and angular breaks of the folds in the Annunciation — it may be considered to have belonged to the latest and maturest time of the master. His powers were in some respects allied to those of Rubens, so that pictures by him have been by unversed judges attributed to Rubens.

The conception of the Saviour, who is crowned and looking at his mother, is serious and digni- fied. The last-named is, perhaps, his finest work, at least I know of no other in which his peculiar amiability of feeling is so strongly expressed.

Paul, 3 and the sketchily- treated St. Solid study of accurate form must come first, because it can be taught to any person : and when that is learnt may come the delight and excitement of colour ; power in which is incommunicable, and which, taken by itself, would be mere intoxication. At the same time, his colouring becomes colder and less clear.
