Consequently, the masks of kyōgen are less numerous in variety than Noh masks. The often archaic language used in the lyrics and the chanted delivery means that these chants are often not understandable to a contemporary audience.

Japanese Kyōgen

Studies on of the Noh actors in 14th century indicate they were members of families specialized in performing arts; they had performed various traditional performance arts for many generations. Trees were planted in large numbers on the hills around Shuri Castle, in order to trap qi in the castle and the surrounding town. The musicians lay aside their drums.
