C.P. Snow (Author of The Two Cultures)

On either side a Siamese Cat Proper. He planned to finish the cycle within five years, but the final novel 'Last Things' wasn't published until 1970. With good fortune, however, we can educate a large proportion of our better minds so that they are not ignorant of the imaginative experience, both in the arts and in science, nor ignorant either of the endowments of applied science, of the remediable suffering of most of their fellow humans, and of the responsibilities which, once seen, cannot be denied.

C.P. Snow (Author of The Two Cultures)

In 1923, he passed the intermediate British School Certificate, and in 1925 went on to take a degree in Physics at the University College, Leicester now the. Snow left out the social sciences altogether from his schema. A new generation of law professors deploys empirical methods to predict court decisions, not by looking at what the justices say but at their characteristics, such as the ideology of the politicians who appointed them.

Bridging C. P. Snow's Two Cultures: Why science needs the humanities, and vice versa

I now believe that if I had asked an even simpler question -- such as, What do you mean by mass, or acceleration, which is the scientific equivalent of saying, Can you read? The 1934 edition is the original and I think it was published by Victor Gollancz. Snow married the novelist in 1950; they had one son.
