Teaching for Learning

Connections Issue 104, Term 1 2018. The calming primary image, the appropriate sizing of text, the use of the colour green associated with life and growth, the abundance of links to other CSU student Thinkspaces all confirm that it is a well thought out blog design. We are trained and are perfectly placed to support these skills.

Teacher Perception of the Adoption and Implementation of DGBL in Their Classroom Teaching: Adoption and Implementation of DGBL Among Teachers: Education Journal Article

Australian Journal of Education, 62 2 , 135-153, Australian Council for Educational Research Limited, DOI: 10.

Transitioning to college: Impact of high school librarians

This can be seen in the frustration that their students go home and Google the answers. Implications include community and educator awareness of the role of the school LMS, an increased educator awareness of the roles of a state-certified school LMS to complement the high school curriculum, and an increased awareness for the need of a LMS in public schools. They indicate that they have little experience implementing DGBL in their teaching and that they lack sufficient expertise to do so successfully.

The Role of the School Librarian

Australian Journal of Language and Literacy, 41 1 , 44-56. In Australia, the influential document Learning for the future ASLA 2003 focuses on three particular roles of the teacher librarian: curriculum leader, information specialist and information services manager. I assume there are no referencing requirements with this? Teacher Librarian, vol 43 1 , 8-11.

Teaching for Learning

Hence the standards Australian School Library Association, 2004 can be a very useful document for teacher librarians who want to influence their school Principals and management as they advocate a stronger role and respect for the school library and teacher librarians in the school. Heliyon, xx xx , xx, Netherlands, DOI: 10.

School Librarians

Herring 2007 , however, realistically states that no teacher librarian could possibly fulfill all of these responsibilities and challenges at the same time, and thus the most effective teacher librarians are those that priorities roles according to the current needs of their students, the staff with whom they work, and the parents in the school community.
